Jacky started her flying career with a PPL in a Piper Tomahawk. Quickly realising that competency is closely linked to recency, she then gained a Flight Instructors Rating and spent several years instructing on single engine aircraft at club level. Her first public transport operation was in the right hand seat of Shorts 360 quickly followed by a type rating on the Jetstream 32. Considerable experience in the UK and Europe operating both scheduled and charter flights followed, before moving to the left hand seat of the Jetstream and then to a Training Captain post with Eastern Airways. Her interest in flight safety grew as she took on the role of their Flight Safety Officer and eventually choosing to work full time on the safety role. She then moved to the UK CAA to work as Flight Operations Policy Specialist and gained considerable insight into the Safety function of both the UK Regulator and EASA. She has now returned to industry leading a team of Analysts and Investigators as Flight Safety Manager at Jet2.com. Her passion for safety in aviation has led to a fascinating career, culminating with the honour of taking the Chair of the UK Flight Safety Committee.
